Republican Dewey

Things vs. People

Texas Annexes Us

Republicans being strict players of the political game sheet at their national convention in Philadelphia last night, nominated Thomas Dewey for president.

It causes no surprise. The governor of New York, heaviest holder of electoral votes in the nation, is nearly always the No. 1 choice of his party for president. Their show the late Franklin D. Roosevelt got to be president. The Democrats figured electoral votes first and personalities second — that Roosevelt as president blossomed out into a truly world figure was an accident of the man, not the deliberate intent of the party bosses who nominated him.

And so it is with Dewey in 1948 — he's the nominee primarily because his present address is the executive mansion, Albany, N.Y. The Republican strategy from here on is obvious: Starting with the New York electoral vote, they hope to capitalize over the country-at-large on American resentment against years of federal attempts to regulate people as well as things. Democrats themselves have sought to reduce the wartime scope of federal authority — but Republicans will stake their campaign on the idea that this can be accomplished fully only by a complete change in administration.

Present odds favor Dewey in November. And yet, there is no certainty. In the Republican camp, millions of dollars are being poured because he is supposed to be hard-headed and willful. One-man government is the thing America is trying to get away from. No matter how you look at it, the federal government is due to go. The election in the next four years: Either between a Democratic president and a divided congress, or a Republican president quarreling with a suspicious congress of his own political faith.

Here is a fresh outrage perpetrated by Texas upon Arkansas: James H. Henry, Hope native, now living in Dallas, sends up a clipping from the Dallas News that says: "The Dallas News is selling in the Lone Star metropolis at 25 cents a slice. Continues the Dallas News:

"Although native to Africa, watermelons are grown in virtually every part of the world, with Parker, Grimes and Hempstead counties generally leading production."

Booby-Prize Campaign Will Undermine American Prestige By JAMES THRASHER

A fight between two boxers who have no defensive skill is usually a rough affair. Each will take a punch to land one, slugging toe to toe without science or finesse. The result usually has the spectators in a howling frenzy of excitement. But it is never a brilliant illustration of the manly art of self-defense.

A political fight of this nature seems to be shaping up between the President and Congress. Mr. Truman has called the present Congress the worst, or maybe the second worst, in the country's history. Some congressmen and public opinion leaders have returned the compliment, without any qualifications.

Thus each indirectly admits the other is right. Mr. Truman doesn't claim that he has been the best President in our history, nor do congressmen boast that the 80th Congress has the proudest record. They have thrown defense aside and are all out for attack.

This does not promise to be an edifying spectacle. And when the President claims that there may be more of the same "when things warm up and we get into politics," many voters will feel a chill of apprehension. For it promises to rob the coming campaign of its vesting in our history, usually survives the solemn quadrennial ceremony of choosing a new Chief executive and body of lawmakers.

The prospect of a debate on whether we really have had the worst government in our history during the last two years is somewhat degrading. It also threatens to belittle certain important issues and deepen the normal partisan divisions of an election year by artificial means.

Any such theme for a campaign debate would tend to degenerate into a Democratic-Republican argument. That, of course, is not what it really is. It is a White House-Capitol Hill argument. There are no issues except the activities that contradict them.

If the present campaign theme is continued, however, we may depend on a broadside of generalities that will blow the inconspicuous sky high. If it continues, the voters will be offered what in effect is the choice of returning to office the nation's worst President or its worst Congress.

There was a time, before this contest for the booby prize began, when it seemed that Congress would be wise to reconvene after the political conventions and give some important and pressing legislation the deliberation that it deserves. But that return would clearly be disastrous.

A booby-prize campaign would be embarrassing enough without its becoming a ruling factor in the acts of Congress. For the shadow of a booby prize cannot be removed from the minds of the nation.

500 Attend 20th Study Day at Hope Station

About 500 farm folks from 22 counties in Southwest Arkansas attended the 20th annual Study Day at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station, here at Hope, today. They heard Dr. Lippert S. Ellis, dean of the University of Arkansas college of Agriculture, discuss the college's program, learned of the latest developments in the research program at the station, and saw demonstrations of machinery and equipment for farm and home.

In outlining the work of the College of Agriculture, Dean Ellis explained the 3-fold program of teaching, experimentation, and extension. The services the people of Arkansas receive from their agricultural colleges depend on the way they put into it, he pointed out. Most rural people are more familiar with the Extension Service and its work than with the other branches, he said, but extension work depends on the teaching program for trained personnel, and upon the findings of the research men for scientific recommendations.

Dean Ellis went on to describe the expanded program of the Experiment Station, including the new outlying work being done in the peach area, the strawberry area, and the alfalfa-production section in eastern Arkansas. He then outlined the needs of the college in terms of expanded personnel and buildings. The Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas has just approved the construction of a new building to house the work in animal and dairy husbandry, bacteriology and veterinary science, and agricultural chemistry, he announced.

The first part of the day was given over to visiting experimental orchards and fields. Good news heard by the farmers was that the Experiment Station is nearly ready to release a new tomato variety which has the quality of Rutgers, the earliness of Marglobe, and in addition is resistant to fusarium wilt, which is becoming serious in many tomato areas.

Dr. V. M. Watts, horticulturist with the Experiment Station, who bred the new tomato variety, discussed the results of the station's fertilizer trials with tomatoes, indicating on page two

Fliers Survive Crash Into Mountains

Fort Fairfield, Maine, June 25 (AP)—William C. Brewster, 36, and Roy Mangala, 34, who disappeared from here 10 days ago in a light plane, emerged afoot from a Canadian wilderness yesterday. They were dogtired, bedraggled but practically unharmed.

Brewster, a nephew of Maine's Senator Owen Brewster, said the plane crashed June 15 on a mountain top about 40 miles northeast of Plaster Rock, N. B. The men escaped with cuts and bruises.

For the first week, Brewster said, they subsisted on "grain, ferns and some frogs' legs."

"Three days ago," he continued, "we ran onto a cache a trapper had left and found some packages of pemmican and a couple of cans of sardines. We've been going on those ever since."

Russia Suddenly Lifts Ban on Berlin Shipments

By JON B. McDERMOTT

Berlin, June 25 (UP)—Russia made another of her bewildering turn-about in cold war strategy today.

After officials in Helmsdorf, on the border between the British and Soviet zones of Germany, announced that the Soviet command at Marienberg, Russian border town, had said the West could resume the control point, had said that the West could resume the control point, had said that the West could resume the control point.

The Russian action reopening the Allied route to Berlin came after a series of Soviet blows against the Western powers in the Western powers clear out of the German capital. The Russian moves had seemed near to achieving that end.

The Russian decision to permit resumption of rail and road traffic from the Western zones of Germany would lift the threat of starvation from some 2,000,000 Germans in sectors of the capital which are under American, British and French control.

It also would relieve any immediate pressure on the Western Allies to withdraw their military and civil establishments—totaling some 30,000 persons—from Berlin.

Earlier Russian orders had halted all traffic from the West into and out of Berlin except by air, and the Allies had admitted they could not possibly supply the Germans in their sectors of the capital by plane.

It had seemed likely that the Russian threat to starve Berliners in the Western sectors ultimately would force the Allies to quit Berlin, turning the city over to Russian control, and the British and American sources had admitted that possibility.

A big backlog of freight trains was piled up at Helmsdorf, where the border closure began a week ago after the Western powers introduced currency reform in the Western zones of Germany.

British authorities at Helmsdorf had halted all German freight trains which normally pass through Helmsdorf en route to destinations in the Soviet zone other than Berlin.

It seemed possible that this British reprisal action caused the Russian pull-down on the closure order. Such big cities as Leipzig in the Soviet zone are heavily dependent for coal and other supplies on the Western zones.

On the face of it, the Helmsdorf report appeared to indicate that the Berlin crisis would be eased again. The Russians have built up tension over the fate of Berlin several times before, but always have eased it off just as it reached a critical point. This appeared to be another move of the same kind.

Until the Helmsdorf report was received, Russia has shown every sign of keeping the heat on the Western powers here.

A Soviet order earlier today banned distribution of foodstuffs from the Soviet zone for use in the American, British and French sectors of Berlin.

Demands Slavs Release U. S. Soldiers

Washington, June 25 (UP)—The United States has protested to Yugoslavia against detention of five American soldiers and demanded their "early release."

A State Department spokesman said American Ambassador Cavenish Cullen had been instructed on Wednesday to deliver the protest to the Yugoslav foreign office. The State Department instructed Cullen to protest "the arrest and detention of five American soldiers."

The five soldiers were taken into custody by Yugoslav military authorities while they were swimming on June 15 at a beach in the Yugoslav-controlled zone of Trieste.

The communication as broadcast by the Moscow radio and distributed in London by the Soviet news agency Tass said an all-German government should be created by the Big Four agreement.

Max Reumann, chairman of the Communist party of the United States, British and French zones of Germany, told a Frankfurt political meeting yesterday west-Germans Communists "will be glad to participate" in any all-German government.

Enlistments in National Guard Are Shut Off

Washington, June 25 (AP)—United States military officials dusted off those "greetings" today for delivery to thousands of youthful draftees next fall.

President Truman signalled the start of the nation's second peacetime draft when he signed the two-year Selective Service bill into law at 3:40 p. m. (CST) yesterday.

Earlier he okayed a $10,000,000-plus fund to build up the army, navy and air force to a strength of 2,000,000 men.

The first result of Mr. Truman's signature on the draft bill was to shut off the flood of enlistments in the National Guard and other reserve units.

The draft bill provided that men 19 through 25 who were signed up in those organizations before the measure became law would not be inducted into the regular forces.

Legal advisers of Defense Secretary Forrestal agreed that the Selective Service law became effective last midnight.

Registration for the draft will get underway as soon as the nationwide machinery is set up, per haps about August 16. The nationwide draft is to be organized to handle the thousands of men 18 through 25 who must sign up.

But new draftees won't start marching off to training camps until September 22, or later. The law provides that 90 days must elapse between enactment of the bill and the order to shoulder arms.

Up to 225,000 men 19 through 25 may be called up for 21 months of service—mostly in the army—in the first twelve months. Another 161,000 youths 18 years old may volunteer for one year's training to escape drafting later.

But 18-year-olds and volunteers must put in six extra years in the reserves. All draftees must serve at least three years in the active reserves, or five years in inactive reserves after their 21-month hitch.

Most volunteers and draftees must put in six extra years in the reserves. All draftees must serve at least three years in the active reserves, or five years in inactive reserves after their 21-month hitch.

In addition, the president is authorized to defer married men and those in essential occupations or in scientific and medical research and study. High school students will get a delay until the end of the school year.

It requires from one to two months to receive a report. For your own protection every member of your family should take advantage of this program.

The clinic will be in Hope only two days before moving to Bleivins on July 1, and on to Columbus July 2.

Mr. Springer said the very first step the city should take is to make a land use survey. He also urged adoption of a zoning ordinance, and establishment of a long-range planning program for the city government.

The speaker complimented Hope on a phenomenally low municipal tax rate and said this was a definite advantage in attempting to obtain new industrial plants here.

He added, however, that Hope needs a definite guide for its future growth, for the city is actually expanding, and present problems are certain to be multiplied as this sections picks up additional factories.

He held of a certain Eastern industrial head who said that his company, now employing 25,000 persons in a great industrial center, would build no more plants of that size in the East, but would set up branch plants of much smaller size in other parts of the country.

Mr. Springer concluded with the reminder to his audience that the state law permits cities setting up a zoning authority to regulate construction types in an area five miles out from the municipal boundaries.

Hempstead Citizens Urged to Take Advantage of X-Ray Clinic Here June 29 and 30

A mobile X-ray unit of the Arkansas State Board of Health will be in Hope to take chest X-rays of every person 14 years old and over on June 29 and 30 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Hempstead community hall. June 29 will be for whites and June 30 will be for negroes.

There is absolutely no charge. This is a service made possible by purchase of Christmas seals, taxes and contributions. Everyone will be required to fill out a card listing name and address, age, occupation and names of family and private physician.

It is not necessary to undress. Women should remove all necklaces, pins and should not wear blouses or dresses with metal decorations. Men should remove coats and empty shirt pockets.

Report on all findings will be confidential. If there is trouble in the chest a report will be mailed directly to the person involved. Details of the findings will be mailed to your physician and you will also be notified to see him for further examination. No one else will receive this information.

It requires from one to two months to receive a report. For your own protection every member of your family should take advantage of this program.

The clinic will be in Hope only two days before moving to Bleivins on July 1, and on to Columbus July 2.

The funny thing about getting

Warren to Be Gov. Dewey's Running Mate

By JACK BELL

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 25 (AP)—The Republicans made it a Thomas E. Dewey-Earl Warren ticket today and closed their convention cheering for a coast-to-coast victory hope in November's presidential elections.

California Governor Warren got the vice-presidential nomination by acclamation once New York's Governor Dewey, unanimously nominated last night for the presidency, pointed him out as the man he wanted for a running mate.

The gavel ending the 24th national Republican convention banged down at 12:30 p. m. (EST) 11:30 a. m. CST.

Chairman Joe Martin ended it on the same note hit on Monday when it opened — victory. Just before the session's end, he introduced Earl Warren as Governor Warren got the vice-presidential nomination by acclamation once New York's Governor Dewey, unanimously nominated last night for the presidency, pointed him out as the man he wanted for a running mate.

The cheering delegates left no doubt they believed him — that this is the year the GOP can end 16 years of Democratic rule.

Warren's "most vice president of the United States."

No other name than Warren's was presented for the vice presidency.

Arizona gave notice of nominating Harold E. Stassen but a few minutes later withdrew it.

Chairman Joseph Martin put Warren's name before the convention and declared him nominated by acclamation.

New York's Dewey, getting his second chance at the presidency, made it an East-West all-governor ticket after an all-night series of conferences.

It quickly was apparent that this East-West all-governor team would be ratified by delegates to this 24th national Republican convention as soon as it was put to a rollcall vote.

Dewey, the New Yorker, who unanimously was given a second chance at the presidency, made known his choice of California's governor after an all-night series of conferences at his hotel headquarters.

Delegates waiting to wind up this last business of the convention would go home made it clear Warren would be nominated when his name came up.

When the roll of states was called, Alabama yielded to Oregon which announced it will nominate Warren, Arizona was next and a delegate announced the name of Harold E. Stassen would be put up by Arizona.

Stassen himself said "I will not put my name in nomination for the vice presidency, but if the convention drafts me, I will accept."

Friends of Warren on the convention floor were urging, however, that his name be withdrawn before the roll is called.

Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio, Dewey's running mate in 1944, told Warren he personally would support Warren and thinks the entire Ohio delegation will.

"I'll be happy to support Governor Warren," said Rep. George Beyer of Ohio.

Backing of Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, said they, too, would support Warren. They had tried to win the nomination for Halleck.

The Dewey forces chose Senator Irving M. Ives of New York to see and Warren's nomination.

There were other considerations and other candidates than Bricker. One of these was Harold E. Stassen, Minnesota's former governor who tried hard but failed to top the ticket. Stassen's best friends said, however, he doesn't want the job.

Halleck tossed Indiana's 29 votes into the Dewey camp yesterday when a lot of delegates weren't quite sure that the New York governor could make the 348-vote grade for the nomination.

Halleck may have been too early in his support as a favorite son, some of the delegates said.

After the third ballot had sealed the issue, he strode into the convention accompanied by his pretty wife.

Surrounded by a tight cordon of long-time helpers who fended off new-found friends, the New York governor grinned widely as he took the Dewey camp's peace chord in his hand and gave a formal campaign opening speech.

"As long as the world is half free," he told the vigorously-fanning delegates, "we must peacefully labor to help men everywhere achieve liberty."

He said that only in "a world order founded upon justice and righteousness" will this planet find the kind of peace "worth having."

Dewey named five national opponents for the nomination amidst bursts of applause. Baldwin's name led all the rest. Leading off with the Connecticut Senator Dewey pointed with pride to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Stassen, Taft, Vandenberg and Warren.

"There has been honest contention, spirited disagreement, but no one has been forced to leave the field," he said. "But let no one be misled. You have given moving and dramatic proof of how Americans, who honestly differ, close ranks and move forward for the nation's well being, shoulder to shoulder."

He chose of a running mate with about Dewey said: "I come to you unfettered by any single obligation or promise to any living person, free to join with you in selecting to serve our nation the finest men and women in the country, free to take our party and our country in meeting the grave challenges of the future."

Hope Fades for Agreement With Lewis

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Hopes for a complete settlement on a new contract between John L. Lewis and the entire soft coal industry faded today when steel company mine interests refused to sign a proposed new to greenback.

Harry M. Moses, negotiator for the "captive" mine interests of the steel concerns, announced his refusal to go along with the settlement as other operators reportedly were sitting down to sign the new contract with Lewis.

"I'm not in accord with the proposed contract and I'm not going to sign it," Moses told reporters. He added that he is opposed to a union shop clause in the agreement.

Southern operators also had opposed this clause, and had insisted on a strict definition of the union shop provision. The clause would force all other miners to join the union mine workers eventually within the provisions of the Taft Hartley labor act.

There was an explanation ready as Lewis accepted the wage boost provisions in the new contract "with reluctance."

The Southern operators were understood to be going ahead with plans to sign up with Lewis, however.

Moses had said yesterday that he would accept the wage boost provisions in the new contract "with reluctance."

Lewis and his negotiating committee left shortly before midnight with the comment that only details remained to be ironed out before reaching full settlement.

Prodded by President Truman's demand that the operators and United Mine Workers resume negotiations which would force less weeklong deadlock, and suddenly agreed on the wage and welfare fund provisions which a week earlier had stopped the talks cold.

The operators were reported willing to grant the 400,000 United Mine Workers a dollar-a-day wage raise and (b) to double the ten-cent-per-ton welfare fund royalty. The second concession would pile up the fund at the rate of $100,000 a year.

The only opposition to the settlement apparently came from Southern operators and steel company interests.

The steel companies own associated mine. Their representative, Harry M. Moses, said they accepted the wage boost provision "with reluctance."

"The group that I represent," he told reporters, "is opposed to the general theory of wage increases and the attendant price advances which are inevitable as a result of this agreement."

The Southern group insisted on a definition of the union shop provision which would force all their miners to join the United Mine Workers eventually.

But Lewis was in a good position to make concessions on that score. The steel fund provision, which would benefit all union members, was expected to attract those workers not now UMW members.

The president's inquiry board, created under the Taft-Hartley law when negotiations seemed to have broken down, was expected to report today.

Few Democrats to Vote in First Primary

Little Rock, June 25 (AP)—Governor Lance today said he believed that "not more than 250,000" voters would be cast at the first Democratic primary next month.

Lance pointed out that this number, if reached, would be more than cast either in the 1944 or 1948 when he was a candidate.

He said he believed the vote total would not be larger because of lack of local contests. He added that this would be true despite the fact that there are nine candidates in his vote estimate.

usually the most hotly contested statewide race.

The vote in the second primary probably will depend largely on the interest engendered by the first ballot. Customarily, however, somewhat larger vote is cast in a second primary than in a corresponding first primary.

Lance said that not all persons who had talked to him agreed with him in his vote estimate. One man whom he did not identify forecast a total vote or around 325,000.

Lance at his news conference today said also:

More than enough signatures have been obtained to initiate a vote in the November general election on a Lance sponsored constitutional amendment to remove the state from the ad valorem tax field, the first man and woman in the primary, free to take our party and our country in meeting the grave challenges of the future."

Campaigner

Roy Dalton

Congressman Oren Harris, Seventh District, today announced that Roy Dalton, of Arkadelphia, would be his campaign manager in his bid for re-election.

Mr. Dalton was born and reared in Onitika county, graduated from Canby High School and attended Magnolia A & M College.

He has an outstanding record in the recent war, serving more than five years as a fighter pilot in the Navy, 2½ years in active participation against the Japanese. Campaigning distinction of having participated in the sinking of the large battleship Yamato and he alone sank a Japanese destroyer, for which he received the Navy Cross.

On returning from the service he became associated in the saw mill business as a partner with his brother in the D. H. Dalton Lumber Company, in Clark county.

He is very glad to be associated with Congressman Harris in his campaign for re-election, said Mr. Dalton. "I have had an opportunity to observe his record in Congress and he has made a good record. With his eight years of experience he will be in a better position to do more for this district and our nation in the future."

I have talked to many veterans and we are grateful for the way Mr. Harris has worked for us. We are supporting him because we know he will continue to work for those things to our best interest and to which we are entitled."

"I have talked to many of our associates in the saw mill and lumber business and they feel as I do that Mr. Harris has not only well represented the forestry program and lumber interest, but all business enterprise that makes up our economic life."

"We are shooting to win in the first primary, July 27th."

Mr. Dalton married Miss Doll Simmons of Arkadelphia, where they are making their home.

Congressman Harris issued a statement that he was indeed glad to have Mr. Dalton as his campaign manager. He said "this expression of confidence from outstanding veterans and successful business interests, including the important timber and lumber industry of this district, is highly gratifying. Mr. Dalton's acceptance is a great pleasure to me, and I know that the campaign will be ably directed."

XXXIX
Lucy came home on the 15th as planned. Tom changed his shift at the rubber factory so he could be with her that day. Such a different Lucy, hiding her face from everyone and refusing to speak to Jessica for those first few days. Lucy, Tom, never mentioning her mother. Had Tom told her what had happened here?

For days Lucy barely touched her food, refusing the trays Jessica struggled to prepare, closing her eyes and sighing sleep. Moody, morose, distant. Then, one morning, when Jessica was busy in the kitchen, Betsy stole upstairs and presently Jessica heard voices above.

"Lucy! It wasn't possible. But when she raced up to Lucy's room, she found Betsy clambering across the bed."

"Let her stay, please." These were the first words Lucy had spoken to Jessica for those first few days. Lucy, Tom, never mentioning her mother. Had Tom told her what had happened here?

Four Brothers Are Again Together

By HAROLD F. OSBORNE
Tremonton, Utah, June 25 —(UP)—The four Borgstrom brothers, who grew up in separate battles with their mothers, are going to live with his people and would like to feel right toward them if I can.

Can you help me?
ELEANORA V.

Answer: The only cure for jealousy is common sense, and that is a remedy few jealous people carry in stock.

Use Common Sense
If you use common sense, you will understand that all of this does not matter against you in any way, and that, in fact, the better son he is, the better husband he will be to you. Conquer your jealousy, or you will get green-eyed every time he shows a member of his family any attention, and every time any member of his family talk with him you will imagine you are being criticized.

Same way about business. If you use common sense, you will know that the main reason husband-to-wife fighting goes on talking about his "old office" until the end of time, and trying to make him neglect his work, for you.

Those people who cannot conquer should have a heart and a single, because they ruin the lives of those who love them enough to get them as husbands and wives. Don't go to live with your in-laws until you have your weakness under control, because you will quarrel with them inside of a week if you don't make them as well as yourself miserable.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am the mother of six children, four of whom are dead. I am a widow and I am very lonely. I have been supported by my daughter who works hard, and who has sacrificed her life to me. I have a son, who is married and well off financially, but he has never given me a penny, although he is one of the pillars of the church in the community in which he lives.

Is there some way that I can get my undutiful son to contribute to my support and lift some of the burden from my single daughter?

A WIDOW
Answer: The law would compel your daughter to contribute to your support. The best way to do it is to take the matter up with a lawyer and have him threaten suit against your son to make him contribute to your maintenance. He evidently values his position in the community, and would not want to be disgraced by having it publicly stated that he refused to take care of the mother who bore him.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have been going with a girl who wants me to marry her in the near future, and who is getting very impatient. After we are married we are to live in a home owned by her father, which she has just had remodeled and for which she has bought the furnishings.

I don't love this girl. She is neither intelligent nor attractive. The only reason I plan to marry her is because she can give me a home in the city, a thing I have always wanted, and she is an only child and will some day inherit a lot of money.

Do you think marriage is too big a price to pay for a home in the city? I dread to think of spending the rest of my life married to some one I don't love.

PAUL L.
Answer: The man who sells himself to a woman makes the worst bargain that it is possible for a human being to make. For the woman who buys you will have a contempt for you that will make her treat you worse than any slave. Don't deceive yourself into thinking that you will have the run of her pocketbook. You will never have a nickel that you won't have to account to her for. Be a man. Make your own living and pick out your own wife.

Danger in Jealousy

Dear Miss Dix: How can I cure myself of jealousy? I am going to be married to a fine man and I am just consumed with jealousy of his work his mother, even his sisters and brothers. We are going to live with his people and would like to feel right toward them if I can.

Salvation Army Campaign Short of Quota

The first annual campaign of the Salvation Army in Hempstead county is $900 short of its goal of $2,400, according to Guy E. Basye, chairman of the local committee.

The campaign started a week ago and a report from the treasurer Roy Anderson this morning revealed a total of $1,500 had been turned in by the various workers and received in the mail.

The campaign will continue as there are several workers who have not reported to the treasurer in their work yet and a check was being made today of the workers to determine just how much was in the hands of these workers who had not finishing seeing all their prospective givers yet.

Mr. Basye wished to point out that this will be the only public campaign for funds this year for the Salvation Army and since they have obtained in their collections in the past an amount equal to that of the goal set by the committee and since a large portion of the amount raised will be retained by the local committee to assist in meeting local welfare needs it is most important that we raise this quota and in order to do so the public is urged to give generously.

Those who have not yet been called on by a solicitor may make their donation to the treasurer making their check or money order payable to The Salvation Army, Mr. Basye said.

Some Christians look for a return of Jesus to earth. Though they think of Jesus as Messiah in His first coming, their look toward the future in the hope of His second coming is not unlike the looking toward the future of many Jews, who do not regard Jesus as the Messiah, but who believe the Messiah is still to come.

It was the Jews, however, who first saw in Jesus of Nazareth the one who was to come. John the Baptist, who found the answer to his question, "Art thou he that should come, or should we look for another?" Peter, who declared, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and Paul, the converted persecutor, who has expressed in his Epistles what to him were the convincing proofs that Jesus was the Messiah.

What of the golden age today? The living God, the Prince of Peace, the one whom Isaiah called Wonderful, Counsellor, the one whom Christians call the Eternal Christ, seems far off in a world of violence and hate. But it was in such a world that the faith, hope and vision arose. It was in such a world that the prophets lived and spoke. It was of such a world that Jesus said, even on the very verge of the Cross, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Can we doubt or fear where the noblest of all mankind have had faith and courage?

The most common fungus infection of the skin is known as tinea, ringworm, or athlete's foot. The last two names are not good; the cause is not a worm nor is it the condition confined to the foot or to athletes!

Several kinds of fungi may be responsible for tinea of the skin, hair or nails. The symptoms and appearance of tinea depend not only on the kind of fungus causing the trouble but also on the area of the body involved, the type of skin affected and the climate, to mention only a few factors. Climate is more important than generally realized. Trouble Spots

The hands, feet (especially between the toes), groin and scalp, are favorite locations. The first sign of trouble is likely to be blistering, scaling, lumps, cracking or scaly-like lesions of the skin. In the groin tinea usually begins as a flattened reddish and slightly raised area of the skin. Itching is common. Fungus infection of the scalp is usually a childhood disorder.

A great many people have mild fungus infections which they do not recognize as such. This often consists of slight scaling and sometimes mild itching between the toes. Moist areas favor the growth of these fungi.

Self-treatment or overtreatment frequently makes the infections much more difficult to cure. The particular fungus responsible for tinea can be identified only with the aid of the microscope. Proper treatment depends on the kind of infection, fungus found, its location, duration and the severity of symptoms.

One of the greatest problems according to skin specialists is to get patients to begin treatment early before the fungus infection has been complicated by untimely self-treatment. Tincture of iodine as a form of self-treatment is particularly undesirable.

Philadelphia, June 22.—Amid the strange clamor of county fair
pageantry and shameless fore-sics, the lean and hungry Republicans pressed on toward a bitter agreement on the fellow who is to turn the rascals out and lead the disillusioned people back to that beautiful opium dream of luxury
and ease and joy.

There are some English correspondents snooping here, nasty bores, who are taken in on passes
to our most sensitive political rites
and then sit down to mock us at
so many pence a word, payable—
the irony of it—out of the seat of those who toil to pay the taxes to be lent to Britain. They have guzzled the juvenile quality of the keynote speech and yet marveled
at the miracle of power, good luck
and clumsy skill that somehow brings the Americans prosperity
and victory out of such sordid profanations of the beautiful theory of popular government. They are wistful about their taunting because, while the tawdry American fete that comes one year in four combines the most splendid show-biz of bank holidays at blackpool
with the carnival aspects of Derby Day at Epsom, nevertheless, in November it always elects a man to king it over the mightiest swash-buckler of the last century. Five years ago the last one, Franklin D.
Roosevelt, committed no error while Helena misused four times.

Memorial Stadium—which will be ready for use in September, is a busy man these hot summer days.
And partly it's his own doing.

Berry is keeping his eyes on here,
making arrangements for the concessions, which the stadium commission will operate; mapping out ticket-selling procedures; planning
the dedication of the stadium at the Arkansas Razorbacks' opening game Sept. 18 and handling other routine chores.

Then he's looking into chances of scheduling some state college
non-sectarian dollar chirping in a synagogue in his greenroom days
in New York. A small town publisher. A sedate son of a mild and harmless president, trained for office, public life and public responsibility, but afflicted with a wise and probably a little bit of a wisdom of the fool with a vote.

And so they run. And yet, upon election, the next fellow to be assumed into a super-human state,
guarded, gilded with majesty and
protected by back-talk at the press conference. The British can't do that so they have had their poor puppet desperately polishing apples and kissing babies
to change their luck.

The wide, walkway of the aching old Bellevue-stratford is littered with dead buttons. Two cops wrestle the cars into and away from the curbs for this is the season of an enormous jam with
all three great associates.
jabbering away on the mezzanine
and Tom Dewey's carnival pitch in the great two-story ball-room at the back of the house. Mr. Taft has the oddest, banner spread-eagled
and scolded and dissed old room.
The elevator traffic is a menace and
the little girls who run the cages sometimes leave their fillers to punch back startled mules, trying to crowd aboard beyond the safety limit. An elevator got away some time ago and slid swiftly to the cellar and the belles in charge are fighting for their lives.

Dusk, half a dozen listless
children of high society age
children of high society age
like Communist disrupters reporting for a riot. Now, jouncing lar-placards on picket-sticks, they set up a wan, self-conscious yelp of
"We want Stassen!"

There is something out of the psychology books. They have read about the lady in red who sprang into being and history in the coliseum in Chicago in 1912
screaming "We want Teddy!" she started a stampede and would have nominated Dewey for president over his understudy, Mr. Taft, but for the fine statesmanship of Elihu Roosevelt who held the bridge against the deceits. This children's cry of "We want Stassen" under two or three times across the bridge was
and then gets separated, disorganized and lost.

Word is passed that Dewey is going to hold a press conference
on the 8th floor at half past six.
The telephone tended to other interests. The legs of the American reporter who now could cover a fire in Cambrise from a shack in Manhattan. The radio made it possible for insincere journalists to cover the crucial series between the Giants and the Cubs from a dash-board set parked by a roadhouse. And now while a few old-fashioned fellows attended in person and made a quorum, others
sat in the birch press room and saw and heard it all in sinful ease.

The Dewey plant was aggressively feminine. Mrs. Carl Hogan, a neighbor from Pawling, who did a hitch in stock and looks like a giantess. She has been in general charge and should be at least an ambassador to some good stylish Latin-American capital when the people. She has worked harder than the panel of the hotel and has explained several thousand times
the complex system of door prizes
for visitors to the shrine where
Mr. Dewey's head-and-shoulders,
ten feet high, dominate an enormous stage. They were serving soft drinks free in a brazen attempt to debauch the ballot with witchery, nylons, badges and cardboard fans.

Mrs. Luce got small thanks and,
at turned out, deserved no more,
for scratching. Her eyes on the opening night. The pretty little creature was invited to make some commodious remarks in general
disparagement of the new deal and there is no complaint of her execution there which left Mr. Truman in gaudy shreds. But she needed in a plug for Senator Arthur Vandenberg, who is, to the stout
me of the party, no better than a kie or a Henry Wallace now that he has seen the Truman foreign policy and doubted it. Mrs. Luce's husband, China Boy Harry, the inventor of the journalistic neurosis
known as "timeliness" or "jerked English," has been a miserably allright but since he made money has been wanting to scatter a choice
Long Island duck, roast beef or poached egg on hash instead of the insipid rice that his parents used to pay for halleluiah in the China trade. Mrs. Luce, a determined woman of the most formidable type in many things, seems to have a weak spot here. She,
too, has made several fortunes and they are agreed on one thing: a highly offensive and debilitating foreign philanthropic policy. Mr. Vandenberg would be the Luce's man for president on this issue and there was bilious disgust in the stag quarters when they saw the glimmer girl up there and she imposed on hospitality to start a domestic fight. Frankly, nobody wanted Mr. Vandenberg and moreover he is one of three candidates who will surely be attacked with savage irrelevances should he be nominated. The other two are the Generals Eisenhower and Mac-Arthur.

Having thrown in a boost for Vandenberg, Mrs. Luce waited while the lions roared and then in a slurred and feathery after-word, included Dewey, Stassen and Taft in her compliments.

"It shows," one of the old bucks
said, "that sex equality simply will not work. You have those babes
every courtesy and they kiss you while they slit your throat. Women will never learn what honor is."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh G. Fullerton, Jr.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 25.—(P)—
Two of the best college ball players that have turned up in years
will stage a private duel when Southern California and Yale have
it out this afternoon and tomorrow
for the second National Collegiate baseball championship. . . . They're Workman, Southern Cal left fielder, and Frank Squire, Yale
pitcher. . . . Workman, a husky 22-year-old, can ride the ball a country mile, as he proved in the western regional playoffs by hitting four homers, two doubles and two triples in 12 times up for a .067
average and knocking in eight runs. . . . Quinn, about the best pitcher in the East, was used twice in the Eastern playoffs, tossing a 15-inning shutout game against North Carolina and coming back
for one relief inning in the final game.

R. S. V. P.
The National Baseball Congress
reports it has sent out over 100-000 letters addressed to "manager"
baseball clubs in every town of 200 or more population in the United States inviting them to enter state non-professional tournaments. . . . Another 100,000 letters have been sent to more definite addresses. . . . Ray Dwyer, Dwyer
still thinks he hasn't reached half the clubs that exist. . . . Anyone who hasn't been invited can get the dope by writing headquarters at Winika, Kas. . . . If there are as many as Ray Dwyer says, they have to hire another stenographer.

End Of The Line
Coaches of the Army Olympic boxing squad, picked in recent trout in Chicago, feel that most of the 18 candidates can hold their own with "Golden Gloves" fighters.
But only the top eight of this group will go into the final tryouts at Boston. . . . Claude Passeau, former pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, understands these high school kids. "They're book worms," Claude protests.
"They're overlooking the solid fundamental baseball holds for them if they'd just give it a fling."

All-Professional
Final Looms in Women's Western
Chicago, June 25.—(P)—An all-professional final brewed today in the 19th-century Western. Open golf tourney as three former champions, all play-for-pay shooters,
and a lone amateur hooked up in
semi-final competition.

Three-time champion Babe Did-
rickson, Zarahia of Ferneland, N.Y., and consistent Helen Dettweiler of Indio, Calif., a wartime ferry pilot and 1939 open winner, tangled in the upper bracket finale.

The lower bracket showdown
was between veteran Patty Berg
of Minneapolis, 1941-43 champion,
and the sole surviving amateur of an original 154-player field, Beverly Hanson of Fargo, N. D.

Mrs. Zarahia gradually has taken the leading 54-hole yard Sky-crest course with her booming
drives and sharp iron play.

The Babe, who was 10 over women's par through the qualifying 18
and first two rounds of match
play, hit her real stride yesterday
in disposing of threatening Polly Riley of Ft. Worth, Tex., 3 and 2.

Babe finished out the 18-hole round with a 73 for a new women's course record.

Recent discoveries indicate that

games in the stadium besides the four the Razorbacks will play here.
Is that all? Heck no, the guy's peering into future seasons, too.
Already he's thinking and carrying on correspondence about some top attractions for the stadium in 1949.

It's becoming obvious the stadium
commission made a wise selection for the manager of the 34,000 seat plant. With a stadium of that size and a promoter of Berry's
calibre, it doesn't take a crystal ball to see Arkansas is in for some mighty fine sports shows in years to come. The program may even include professional football before long.

Berry, an enthusiastic, straight-
from-the-shoulder type of man, isn't interested solely in football and other attractions which may be offered. A baseball fan, he built under each stand. The rooms will
give bands a place to leave equipment and prepare formations.

The Memorial Stadium will have a feature it is believed no other can offer. A bandstand is being built under each stand. The rooms will
give bands a place to leave equipment and prepare formations.

One of our AP co-workers, Jim Thomason, may be the best person who ever successfully predicted a triple play.

It happened in Pine Bluff one
sultry night 12 or more years ago.
Jim and George Heister, rabid Pine Bluff fans, were watching the home team in a Cotton States League game.

Heister began moaning when the Pine Bluff pitcher loaded the bases, but Jim consoled him with:
"Don't worry, George, this next batter will hit into a triple play."

Heister, sensing a sure thing,
bet Jim a straw hat against a cigar
that there wouldn't be a triple play.

Sure enough, the next batter
lined the first pitch to the Pine Bluff first baseman, who started a quick triple killing.

To top it off, Thomason says it was the only triple play he ever saw and that he never received the hat.

El Dorado's Ollers, trying to climb out of the Cotton States League's second division, have been signing new players left and right. One of the latest additions is Calvin Chapman, a veteran second baseman-outfielder who played for several years with Nashville
and Chattanooga of the Southern Association. He had a lifetime batting average of .330 in the Southern. Last year he was playman-ager of the Clarksdale Planters in the Cotton States loop and hit better than .300.

Big Bout May Again Give Way to Rain

New York, June 25.—(UP)— Clearing weather brought hope today that the twice-postponed
heavyweight title fight between Joe Louis and Jersey Joe Walcott
would be held at Yankee Stadium
tonight despite a mid-day forecast
of scattered late afternoon rain
and early evening showers.

The skies were expected to clear
by fight time and the prediction was for fair weather tonight. The sun was shining brightly during the morning, but it was hot and humid.

As the forecast was issued,
thousands of persons began jam-
ping Madison Square Garden for refunds. The lines became so long and unruly that a special detachment of police was called out to keep order.

In view of the weather forecast,
it was believed the gate might go as low as $500,000. It was expected originally to near the million dollar mark.

If a third postponement is necessary, the fight will be re-scheduled for tomorrow night. Fair and cool weather were forecast for Saturday.

Champion and challenger got as far as their dressing rooms last night before the deluge drenched
the stadium. And more than $850-000 worth of tickets had been sold,
according to Sol Strauss of the 20th Century Club.

If the 34-year-old Negroes reach the ring tonight, Strauss will be lucky if $500,000 has been paid to witness their return 15-round
brawl.

Because of the two deferrals
and today's unfavorable forecast,
visiting fans—at least—were expected to storm the box offices
for refunds on tickets or ticket
stubs.

That the weather had landed a stunning blow on the gate was indicated last night when representatives of ticket speculators were offering choicest ringside seats at their face value of $50, or for less.

Acting promoter Strauss was still optimistic, however. He said,
"Certainly there will be many refunds to visiting fans; but I expect those refunds to be more than balanced by new sales to delegates
from the practically completed Republican convention at Philadelphia. They'll come to New York in droves now."

Louis, who returned to his camp
at Pompton Lakes, N. J., last night, was scheduled to motor
back to the stadium late today.
Walcott remained at a downtown hotel. Both went to bed early last night and both were scheduled for brisk hikes today. Their menus called for a light meal in the forenoon and a hearty one in mid-afternoon.

When Strauss went to the stadium
last night, he was confident of staging the bout; for no rain had fallen in New York during the day.
However, big black clouds soon took over the skyways above the stadium. Lightning and thunder provided the prelude to a brief
shower that started at 7:00 p.m.

There was a deceiving let-up;
then, at 7:40 a near cloudburst
drenched the stadium and sent

Merchants Lose Tough Contest to Clarksville

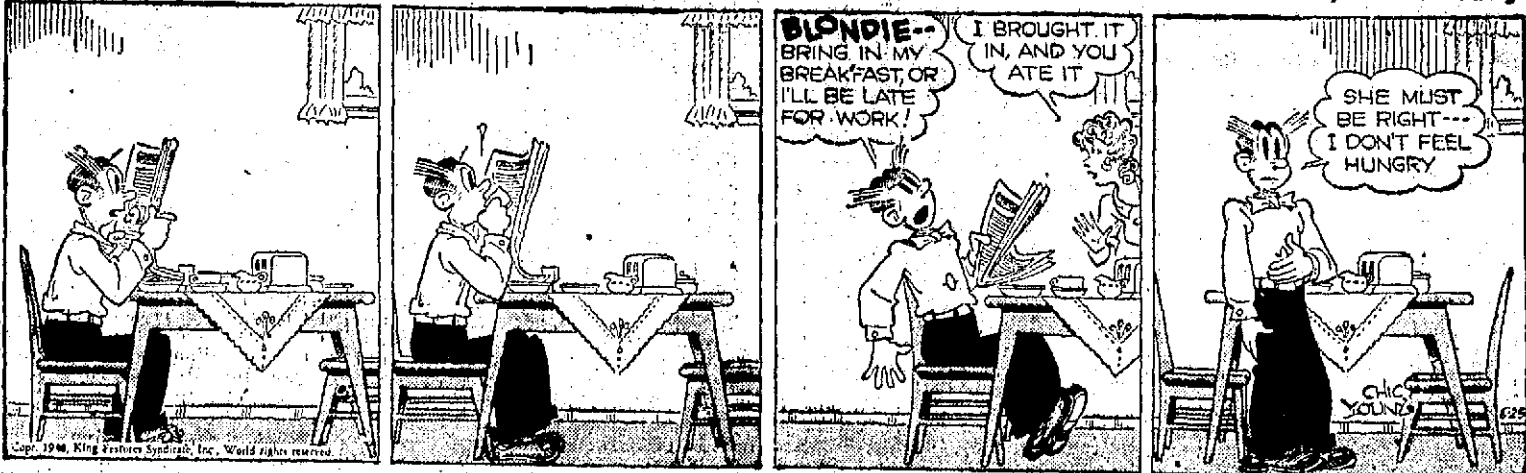

2,000 sports fans who turned out
at Clarksville, Texas last night expecting to see a real ball game
were not disappointed; with the Clarksville Allstars nailing out Hope Merchants 9 to 7 in two innings of extra play.

This was without a doubt the best and hardest game that the Merchants have played this season. It was a thriller from start to finish.
The game was tied up four times
at the score of 3, 4, 6, and 7, and had to go into the last half of the ninth with two away before the Clarksville team could score. The Hope boys played heads up ball
all the way and never gave up.

Ferguson and Taylor turned in some fine pitching as Ross, White,
and J. Bell did a bangup job in the infield. Taylor held the Clarke-ville boys hitless for the last five innings. Connie went the route for Clarksville allowing only 7 hits to the Merchants. Jack Bell led the hitting for Hope and hit a home run in the first inning with two men on. On next Thursday night, July 1, the Clarksville team will play the Merchants here at Fair park and a record crowd is expected to see this game as the Hope boys will be working hard to win. The game scheduled for tonight has been called off be-

'Saigon', Is Combination Adventure, Mystery and Romantic Film

All Star Cast in Film at Rialto Sunday

Benedict Bogaus has established a distinctive record in his four short years as an independent producer. And his newest offering, which opens Sunday at the Rialto theater, the star-studded "Christmas Eve," featuring seven Hollywood luminaries, follows the pattern set by such hits as "The Macomber Affair" and "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." With George Raft, George Brent, Randolph Scott, Joan Blondell, Virginia Field, Dolores Moran, and Ann Harding lending their skill at characterization to the leading roles, "Christmas Eve" tells the story of a wealthy aged spinster, her three foster sons whose initiative and independence have led them far afield from the cultured and protected youth she offered them, and her staid nephew who involved himself and his aunt's finances in some questionable dealings.

The three foster sons are played by Brent as Michael, the ne'er-do-well playboy; Raft as Mario, a nightclub operator in South America who is on the wrong side of the law; and Scott as Jonathan, a broken-down rodeo performer. Ronald Denny is nephew Phillip, who comes to grief when the "boys" finally come home on Christmas Eve to unmask him.

In the stellar feminine roles, Miss Blondell is Ann Michael's hot-tempered but adoring fiancée who thwarts more than one of his get-rich-quick schemes. Virginia Field as Claire, Mario's choice for romance, unconsciously involves herself with some escaped Nazis, and Miss Moran, Mrs. Benedict Bogaus in private life, plays Jean, a socialite social worker who enlists Jonathan's aid in breaking up a baby-adoption ring and winds up selecting him for a life-time partner.

Miss Harding, the picture's fourth feminine star, does what few leading ladies dare to do: tackles the part of 70-year-old Aunt Matilda.

Among the supporting players, Clarence Kolb enacts a local judge, John Littel plays the representative of the FBI who trails Raft to his South American refuge and Douglas Dumbrille, master-minds the baby-adoption ring.

The picture was adapted from original stories by Laurence Stallings and Richard H. Landau. Edwin L. Marin directed the film which United Artists is releasing.

Gaquin Favored in Southwest Open Meet
Little Rock, June 25 — (P) — Already warned that tough sledding lies ahead, top-seeded Lou Gaquin made his men's singles debut in the Southwest Open tennis tournament at the Little Rock country club today.

Faquin, Memphis court veteran, met Dick Farr, Wynne, Ark., in one of three first-round matches carried over from yesterday.

Defending Champion George Dunklin of Pine Bluff, Ark., who was seeded second to Faquin, opened his bid yesterday with an easy 6-0, 6-1 conquest of Glen Henderson, highly-regarded University of Tulsa, Okla.

Second round competition was to follow completion of the first round today.

The junior singles division, with a short entry list at the beginning, was pruned down to the semifinals. In this section, Trupin met Jim Porter of Little Rock and Nick Johnson, Little Rock, met Dick Osborne, Dallas, today.

Events Appear to Be Moving Towards Formal Division of Germany Into Two States

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Events appear to be moving rapidly towards a formal division of Germany into two states — one comprising the Soviet Eastern zone and the other the Western zone occupied by America, Britain and France.

Russia and six satellite countries have been staging a highly secret conference in Warsaw, and are considering the creation of a separate state in Eastern Germany. They also are said to be planning another assault on the Marshall plan.

Present in this meeting are representatives of the Soviet Union, Albania, Poland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary. The Russian delegation is headed by none other than Foreign Minister Molotov. Stalin's right-hand man. The streets of the Polish capital have been lined with thousands of troops armed with tommy-guns to ensure the safety and privacy of the conference who have been meeting Wilanow Palace. Should Moscow create a separate German state it would of course be added to the satellite nations which Russia overran during and since the war.

A most extraordinary and dangerous aspect of this situation is that once a formal division of Germany has been effected, the city of Berlin lies in the heart of the Russian zone although it is partitioned among the four allies for purposes of military occupation. Thus not only would both Eastern and Western Germany be deprived of the capital but the most important communications center of all Europe would be divided against itself — a badly crippled giant.

Actually such a Russian move would formalize a situation which already exists in effect. The difference would be that hope of a united Germany would be killed thereby dealing a heavy blow to general European economic rehabilitation. Germany long has been a keystone of continental economy and the Western Allies have been striving for unity in order to speed the general program of recovery.

The new Soviet project represents another offensive in her cold war against Democracy. It would create a delicate situation but would fall short of actual gunfire.

Small wonder that former President Hoover declared in his address at the Republican national convention in Philadelphia: "Today men in the Kremlin hold in their right hands the threat of military aggression against all civilization. With their left hands they work to weaken civilization by borrowing from within. These tyrants have created a situation new in all human experience."

Small wonder too that the Republican platform should set forth: "Our foreign policy is dedicated to preserving a free America in a free world of free men. This calls for strengthening the United Nations and primary recognition of the rights of other peoples. Prudently we must protect the interests of the liberty of other peoples. Prudently we must conserve our own resources. We shall cooperate on a self-help basis with other peace-loving nations."

And again: "We pledge a vigorous enforcement of existing laws against Communists and enactment of such new legislation as may be necessary to expose the treasonable activities of Communists and defeat their objective of establishing here a Godless dictatorship controlled from abroad."

As things now stand there seems small chance of achieving a United Germany short of some development which will enable the people of Eastern Germany to re-assert themselves and throw off the Muscovite yoke.

In Costa Rica, voting in elections is compulsory for all men under 70 years old.

Campaigns Have Unusual Moments

By BOB BROWN

Little Rock, June 24 — (UP) — Political campaigns have their unusual moments, and there are times when many questions go unanswered.

Such as: Why will a man gamble hundreds of thousands of dollars on the off chance of getting a $100,000 a year job? Or why will an obvious also-ran persist in throwing away his or someone else's hard-earned money?

But the oddest quirk of the present gubernatorial campaign in Arkansas is the collective allergy to publicity — the stuff that makes the wheels go 'round.

At this point, a bored front-page editor may take time out to scoff. But nevertheless it remains true. Men who maneuvered to get their names in the news before the deadline for filing now are casually losing off thousands of dollars worth of free publicity. They are shying away from it just as a small boy avoids his dancing class.

And newsmen accustomed to throwing away handouts from overly-ambitious press agents, are at a loss to explain this publicity lethargy.

Failure to take full advantage of the state's radio stations and front pages has not been limited to any one candidate. And with the first primary race, the away newsmen are still scratching for "new angles" — which normally flood the newsroom.

James (Uncle Mac) Mackrell, the Little Rock radio evangelist, has no publicity man. Running on a stringent budget, he will answer questions freely — if and when he can be located. But he is out of his headquarters most of the time. His only publicity venture to date was a regular broadcast, a local appearance and a few ads has been the publication of a monthly newspaper.

Sid McMath of Hot Springs also has no publicity man. He is touring the state so fast that even his own headquarters can't keep up with him most of the time. Advancing copies of his speeches — important to newspapers with early deadlines and radio stations with work to do — have been made available only occasionally.

Tuesday night at Arkadelphia for instance, he was reluctant to issue advance excerpts because he planned to blast machine politics and did not want to "be tied to a text."

Jack Holt, an old-time campaigner with an extensive publicity staff, confuted newsmen by attempting to prove that a speech made one day would not be made until the following day. The former attorney general passed up front page stories throughout the state on his opening at Searcy when he tackled a Sunday release on a speech scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday.

John Longdale, Jr. of Longdale is his own publicity agent. And it is not unusual for a reporter to get up from his supper table and hear him say from Mona or Camille: "This is John Longdale reporting."

Jim Merritt of McGehee has limited his blasts primarily to paid advertising and a few press releases.

Horace E. Thompson has developed probably the most efficient publicity department but even it makes mistakes. For instance, an important press release was dropped through the wrong mail slot. Another was held until nearly

Ladd and Lake Star in Saenger Feature Sunday

Anyone shopping for an exciting movie combining adventure, mystery and romance will get his money's worth and more from a visit to the Saenger theater where Paramount's thrilling picture, "Saigon," opens Sunday.

"Saigon," which tells with supercharged suspense what happens when three pals embark on a mysterious and sinister mission to Saigon, co-stars Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake. This is the fourth time the screen's favorite tough guy and the peek-a-boo blonde have been teamed, their earlier successes being "This Gun for Hire," "The Glass Key" and "The Blue Dahlia."

Ladd, playing Larry Briggs, late of the Army Air Forces, once again assumes the type of role which has made him one of the most popular movie stars in the world. He's cynical, quick on the draw, and ready to fight at the first sign of the double-cross.

When he suspects that Miss Lake, whom he loves, is an accomplice of Stephen Maris, suspiciously wealthy Shanghai importer, he immediately goes on guard and causes the beautiful blonde no end of trouble until she clears herself.

Supporting Ladd and Lake, and helping to make "Saigon" the sensational picture that it is, are such top-drawer performers as Douglas Dick, Wally Cassell, Luther Adler, Morris Carnovsky, Mikhail Rasmussen and Luis Van Rooten.

P. J. Wolfson, the screenplay man, fashioned the story by Julian Zimet. Leslie Fenton directed "Saigon," which this reviewer recommends for an early visit.

Pells Beat Rocks Twice to Help Standing

By The Associated Press
The New Orleans Pelicans came out of the Southern Association cellar in two big strides last night with a double win bill over the Little Rock Travs, 5-3 and 6-2. The victory sent the Pells ahead of Chattanooga who took a 12-2 licking from the red hot Birmingham Barons.

Atlanta won over Nashville, 7-6, for the Crackers' first home-parade victory over the Vols this season in six tries and Memphis won a home stand game with Mobile, 6-3.

The Pelicans won their first game in Little Rock on Fred Vaughn's three-run homer in the sixth. Vaughn, in his second run, three until Vaughn sent the ball over the centerfield fence. Jim Kleckley and Stan Ferek gave the Travs only five hits in the opener.

The late game was tied up one and one going into the eighth. New Orleans exploded with two runs and Little Rock rallied to pick up one run. The game was called after the eighth for curfew.

Orleans now leads two games out in the series.

The Memphis Chicks halted a Mobile rally in the ninth after three runs to win.

Bob Schultz went all the way for Memphis, giving up seven hits. He had a shutout going into the ninth. Storie, Kelly, Antonelli and Sciala led the 12-hit Memphis attack.

Memphis won the Mobile series three games to one.

Dutch and Partner Roll Up Day's Best Score
Toledo, O., June 25 — (P) — The boys who spent some time yesterday in the pro shop fixing up their rain swept opening round of the $11,650 Inverness 11th annual four-ball matches.

While most of the 16-player all star cast was on the practice tees and greens, big Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., and the former PGA champion, Herman Keiser, the former Masters king from Akron, O., and Ed Furgol, the Detroit sensation with the right left arm, were using files and emery wheels.

In the opening round, Keiser and his partner, big Clayton Haefer of Charlotte, N. C., wheeled right out front with a five-up victory over former open champion Lloyd Mangrum and curly-haired Dick Metz, clipping seven strokes off par with a 64.

Hamilton and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock popped up with eight birdies and a 65, best score of the day, in downing Johnny Palmer and "Skip" Alexander, both of North Carolina, two up.

As they go into today's double round, the standing is: Ben Hogan-Keiser, plus 3; Ben Hogan-Jimmy Demaret, plus 3; Bobby Locke-Furgol, plus 2; E. J. Harrison-Hamilton, plus 2; Chuck Herbert-Vic Ghezzi, minus 2; John Finner-Skip Alexander, minus 2; Cary Middlecoff-Jim Ferrier, minus 3; Mangrum-Metz, minus 5.

Today's schedule includes in the afternoon round: Middlecoff-Ferrier vs Mangrum-Metz.

10 p.m. on a Saturday night — too late for most Sunday morning political stories which are written earlier in the day.

The other candidates — Charles Fleming of Forest City William P. Jennings of Texarkana and Bob Ed Loftin of Fort Smith — are seldom heard from.

Probably the top reason for failure to take advantage of this free publicity is a shortage of experienced newspaper men willing to take publicity jobs for short campaigns. Or perhaps the candidates believe they should be called upon personally each day, but they've never tried to nail down nine gubernatorial candidates in nine different sections of Arkansas?
